ITALIAN ATTACKS ON FRANCE ANGER BRITISH LEADERS

Outburst Threatens to Force Cancellation of Chamberlain's Visit of Appeasement to Rome.

PACT GUARANTEED REGION STATUS QUO

Now England Wonders Whether Agreement Covers Territory Involved.

LONDON (Saturday) Dec. 3.—(UP)—Italy's new outburst of anti-French threats, hitting directly at British interests in the Mediterranean, early today threatened to force cancellation of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's "appeasement" visit to Rome, scheduled for early January.

Morning newspapers, warning that there can be no real Anglo-Italian friendship unless Premier Benito Mussolini "repudiates" the war warnings appearing in the Fascist press, predicted a possible cancellation of Chamberlain's visit unless the Italian propaganda ceases.

Conservatives and Laborites in parliament used the acute Italian-French tension to open a new attack on Chamberlain's policy of appeasement with the dictators and prepared to subject him to a barrage of questions in the house of commons on Monday.

He will be asked regarding the Italian and British pledges to respect the status quo in the Mediterranean, as provided for in the new Anglo-Italian pact of friendship put into effect only two weeks ago, and whether England would go to France's aid in event of any Italian move against Tunisia or other French Mediterranean possessions.

Vernon Bartlett, well-informed diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle who was elected to parliament recently, said that unless Italy ceases her agitation against Tunisia and other French territory it "may be impossible" for Chamberlain to go to Rome at Mussolini's invitation.

The Daily Express said British officials fear that if the Fascist attacks continued France would be forced to consider the withdrawal of her new ambassador to Italy, Andre Francois-Poncet.

France late Friday asked Britain to support her in dealing with the Italian situation, pointing out that any Mediterranean threat is as much the concern of Britain as of France.

As result, it was reported that the British ambassador in Rome, the Earl of Perth, might "suggest" to Mussolini that he adopt a friendlier attitude toward Britain's ally.

The new rift in Italo-French relations, brought on by shouted demands in the Italian chamber of deputies for return of French-held Tunisia and other former Italian territories, was admitted to be a blow to Chamberlain's hopes and the new Anglo-Italian pact of friendship.

The pact of friendship was based on British and Italian promises to respect the status quo in the Mediterranean and, therefore, any Italian move against Tunisia, Nice or Corsica would upset the pact and involve Italy in trouble.

Running Man Is Shot Down; Plea of Girl Found in Pocket

Victim of Detectives' Bullets Lies in Bed at Grady Unable To Explain; Clipping Is Appeal of Daughter for Word From Father.

Conscious, but too critically wounded to do more than gasp an occasional monosyllable, a man about 30 years old lay in a Grady hospital bed early this morning—in his chest the seared path of a detective's bullet, and in the pocket of his coat a poignant plea of a 12-year-old girl for her father's return.

Identity of the man—shot as a fugitive who disregarded detectives' shouts to halt—hinged between the child's naive letter, clipped from a newspaper, which mentioned the name of "Floyd Erwin Conner," of Gainesville, and a card on his person which tentatively identified him as "Bill C. Stargel," also of Gainesville. Police were inclined to accept the latter identification.

Efforts were made early this morning to reach relatives of the wounded man in Gainesville. Both the names of Conner and Stargel are well known there, and officers believed it would not be difficult to establish positive identification.

A third occupant of the detectives' machine, J. L. Matthews, of Decatur, aiding the officers in another case, recovered the suitcase containing the whisky.

The wounded man was one of two men accosted on Fair street, near Cherokee street, by Detectives C. R. Allen and J. D. Corley, cruising in an automobile. The pair ran, one of them dropping a suitcase containing 3 gallons of whisky.

This fugitive sought refuge beyond an embankment of a razed house. Corley told other officers he fired three times, and Allen shot once. The fugitive, quickly captured, was taken to Grady hospital by officers. Doctors pronounced his condition critical.

The letter, contained in the newspaper clipping, read: "I am a girl 12 years old. I am in the seventh grade and have not missed a lesson or been tardy in the past three terms. I have two sisters and one brother. I am asking that you help me find my daddy, please. He left us June 15 to find work and we have never heard from him since. His name is Floyd Erwin Conner. Please print my plea and if anyone knows him or his whereabouts, please do write me."

30-MILE-AN-HOUR LIMIT IS APPROVED BY CITY COUNCIL

Ordinance Lowers Present Auto Speed in Residential Areas by 5 Miles; 25 M. P. H. Move Fails.

MAYOR AND BANKER CLASH ON PARKING

Committee Votes Restriction on Unloading by Trucks in Rush Hours.

Three ordinances, including a 30-mile-an-hour uniform speed limit, were approved by the police committee last night in an effort to untangle Atlanta's traffic at a meeting featured by verbal tiffs between Mayor Hartsfield and Frank Berry, bank official, and with Alderman I. Cioer Hailey.

In addition to the speed limitation, which Captain Malcom and Police Chief Hornsby promised would be strictly enforced, the committee approved an ordinance prohibiting trucks from parking in restricted areas during rush hours, and another making Marietta street from Forsyth to Peachtree non-parking between the hours of 7 to 9 o'clock in the morning and from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Authorize Exceptions. Assistant City Attorney J. Charley Murphy said the truck delivery ordinance would be drawn to authorize the chief to allow loading and unloading during rush hours in emergency cases.

A heated argument developed between the mayor and Berry over Hartsfield's proposal to eliminate angle parking in the downtown area. Berry declared angle parking was necessary on Marietta street to care for banking clients, but Hartsfield contended parallel parking would suffice and would also add two lanes of traffic to the important street.

"I'll never agree to spend a dime on street widening down there until we make use of the wide streets we have by banning angle parking," Hartsfield said. The committee refused his proposal but agreed to Councilman Cecil Hester's suggestion that no parking be allowed there during rush hours.

Hailey's Attack. Hailey attacked the mayor for laying at the door of council the responsibility of traffic reforms, declaring that the police committee is the place for originating reforms and adding that only two pieces of legislation brought from the committee have been turned down by council.

Hartsfield urged adoption of a 25-mile-per-hour speed limit, being backed by Captain Malcom and Lon Sullivan, educational director.

Roosevelt and Rivers Hold Joint Press Conference

President Roosevelt and Governor Rivers are shown as they gave a joint interview to the press yesterday following their conference at Warm Springs. They worked out what was termed an informal understanding whereby Georgia will share in future public works appropriations. Last week the President had threatened to cut off further funds to Georgia.

ADAMSON HEARING TO BE HELD TODAY

Three Roadhouse Operators Convicted by Clayton Juries Yesterday.

Special to The Constitution JONESBORO, Ga., Dec. 2.—Demand for the ouster of Sheriff E. L. Adamson tomorrow will climax a week of trials, marked here today by three guilty verdicts, in a drive to clean up roadhouses, break up slot machine operations and ban the "bug" in Clayton county.

Adamson tonight announced he is ready to answer a charge filed by Roy Leathers, solicitor of the Stone Mountain superior court circuit, that he entered into a contract and accepted fees illegally for collection of Clayton county tax fi. fas.

Judge James C. Davis, of the circuit, said last night he "understood" Adamson would be arraigned at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Mae Griffith and Eddie Jones, of the Club Lido, on Highway No. 41, were charged with lottery in connection with slot machine operations.

Roy Stegal, 28, of the Log Cabin, on Highway No. 42, the new Macon road, also was found guilty of the charges against him—illegal possession of liquor.

Judge Davis yesterday notified DeKalb county court attaches to

4 Spies Get 'Mercy Of Democracy'

2 to 6-Year Terms Imposed on Nazi Agents; U.S. Sleuths Berated.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP)—With a grim reference to punishment for espionage in Germany, Federal Judge John C. Knox today imposed prison sentences of from two to six years on three men and a woman accused of selling United States military information to Nazi Germany.

"Had these defendants been apprehended within the confines of Germany," said Judge Knox, looking sternly at the four, "their fate would have been much more fearful. As it is, the agents of a totalitarian state are receiving the mercy of a democracy."

Then, without mentioning the headsman's ax directly, he added, "We have no sawdust sprinkled on our prison yards."

Johanna Hofmann, 26, was sentenced to four years.

Six years was imposed on Otto Herman Voss, 38. Erich Glaser, 28, and Guenther Gustav Rumrich, 32, were sentenced to two years each. Rumrich testified for the government.

The courtroom was jammed when Judge Knox mounted the bench.

"I recall quite vividly," he said, "what they did between 1914 and 1918. In fact, the technique shows little improvement over the bungling efforts of Bernsdorff and Boy-ed during the war."

He remarked, too, on the "inappetence of our own law-enforcing agencies which allowed some of the defendants to escape." Fourteen persons indicted are fugitives.

For Miss Hofmann, who stood with bent shoulders, sobbing into her handkerchief, he expressed sympathy.

"She was thrilled to think that she served her government; but she has been abandoned. . . . If she alone were involved I would be glad to withhold sentence and return her to Germany."

ELECTION IS URGED ON REED REPORT

Civic Leaders Insist That Reforms Be Placed Before the Citizens.

A special committee of city council studying the Reed report was told yesterday, with sharp insistence, that citizens must be given the opportunity to decide, in a referendum, the fate of governmental reforms advocated by the municipal government expert.

More than 100 persons attended the hearing, all agreeing that "the proposals made by Dr. Reed are the business of the people and should be voted on by them."

J. P. Allen, chairman of the citizens' survey committee, sponsors of the Reed report, announced that lawyers next week will turn over to the council committee drafts of legislation to revise the governmental functions of city and county.

Members said action by the committee will be postponed pending a study of the drafts.

"Even if members of council and the legislature take the stump against the proposed revisions, we want them to see that the people have a chance to vote on the changes," said Allen.

The citizens did not discuss the report in detail, but put their proposition before the council committee solely on the basis of the right of the people to vote on the proposals.

Dr. C. C. Aven, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, told the committee that revisions combining the public health activities of the city and county should be advocated.

Mrs. Stephen B. Ives, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, praised the Reed report, while Guy Holcomb, vice president of the Association of Petroleum Retailers, requested that the report "not be relegated to the report of Women's Clubs; W. E. Hopkins, secretary of Tammany, Inc.; Frank Etheridge, businessman; Walter Dillion, attorney; Alvin Cates, realtor; and William A. Horne Jr., president of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce. A score of business, civic and political organizations were represented.

F. D. R. REASSURES GEORGIA WILL GET SHARE OF FUNDS

Beaming President Discloses Solution After Talk With Governor, Camp and Jim Gillis.

NO AMENDMENT IS CONTEMPLATED

Program Envisages Creation of Boards of Authority for Each Project

Special to The Constitution WARM SPRINGS, Dec. 2.—Visibly happier from 10 days of vacationing, President Roosevelt told a press conference today that he is satisfied with Governor Rivers' plans for repayment of anything the state may obtain from the PWA and that Georgia's share of federal public works money is not in jeopardy.

With Governor Rivers interposing detailed information occasionally, the President told reporters that he had come to an informal understanding with the state's chief executive and that the state would share with other commonwealths in future appropriations for public works.

Camp, Gillis See F. D. R. The interview followed immediately after Rivers, District Attorney Lawrence Camp, the President's defeated senatorial candidate, and Chairman Jim L. Gillis, of the state Democratic executive committee, had visited the President at the Little White House.

When the newspapermen asked the President if Governor Rivers had assured him that Georgia would be able to get around its constitutional limitations affecting borrowing of PWA funds, the President turned to the Governor and relayed the question to him for a reply.

"Going to Be All Right." "I think so," Rivers replied. "Everything is going to be all right. We are co-operating and will continue to co-operate."

Rivers' plan, which will be submitted to the legislature at its forthcoming session is understood to call for the creation of a board of authority to handle each PWA project in such manner as to make it a self-liquidating project.

The program is expected to be set forth in detail in Rivers' inaugural address, scheduled for January 10, or in his message to Congress.

Culbertson 'Kibitzes' on Divorced Wife at Tourney, Opines That He Hopes They'll 'Rewed in Few Years'

Famous Couple Remain Bridge and Business Partners Despite Rift

CLEVELAND, Dec. 2.—(UP)—Ely Culbertson, the famous bridge expert, "kibitzed" on his divorced wife tonight as she competed in the National American Bridge tournament's open team-of-four play.

Culbertson, when called upon to address the players and fans, praised his wife's bridge-playing ability, but did not comment on reports they will remarry soon.

However, he told reporters he hoped to remarry her "in a few years." The famous couple, whose divorce attracted nation-wide attention a year ago, remain "bridge and business partners," he said.

PEDAGOGUE URGES STUDY BY LIVING, NOT BY 'LESSONS'

America's Greatest Teacher, Dr. William H. Kilpatrick, Outlines Philosophy in Address Here

By LEE FUHRMAN.

"The new school tries to find itself on life's study and life's learning, instead of on assigned lessons, marks, grades and promotions."

Dr. William H. Kilpatrick, professor-emeritus of education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, revealed this philosophy of educating youth before several hundred Atlanta and Georgia educators last night as part of a three-day series of study conferences under auspices of the Progressive Education Association.

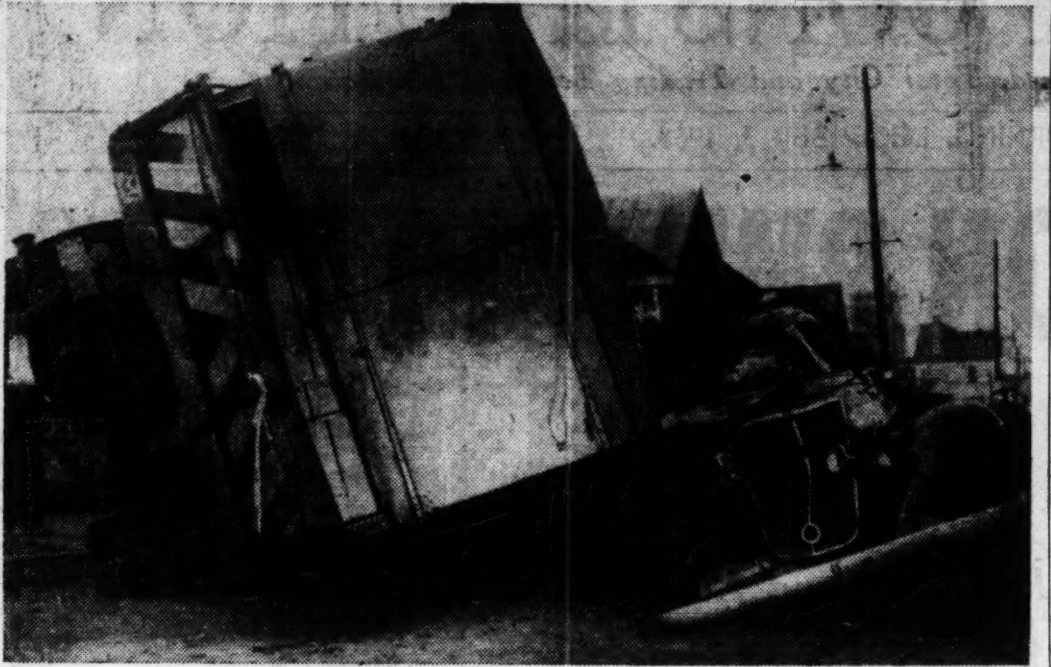

The subject of Dr. Kilpatrick, a native Georgian and often termed "America's greatest living teacher," was "Progressive Education and the World We Live In."

"We learn what we live to the degree that we live it," said Dr. Kilpatrick, "and in this way we build our character, and what we build stays built. Thinking, feeling, impulse and bodily movement must be going on at once, in harmony, and that is the aim of the new school."

"The method has been tried and found to work successfully in schools all over the world. It takes care of the bright child, as well as the dull child and the average child. And it brings the old problem of discipline almost to a vanishing point."

"Life-study springs from within, called out by each new and unexpected situation. It makes for creative thinking, in which all phases of the personality are at work. This gives life its zest and interest. It is the kind of thinking needed if the large-scale problems

Truck Piles Up on Sedan--Riders Escape With Lives

Five men were injured when a heavy truck swerved into a sedan yesterday at Fair and Terry streets. The truck, going west on Fair street, swerved into the passenger car, traveling east on Fair street. The truck overturned on the sedan.

Building Permits Gain in November

Building permits for November showed a sharp gain over the corresponding month last year in Atlanta, reports revealed yesterday.

Total of permits issued last month was $442,628. This amount was $167,095 more than the permits for November of 1937, and was $61,819 over the month of October, 1938, permits.

Low-cost housing is accounting for much of the increase, it was said.

5 HURT AS TRUCK SLICES CAR IN TWO

Rescuers Extricate Victims From the Twisted Steel With Crowbars.

Crash of a heavy truck and a passenger automobile at Fair and Terry streets yesterday resulted in injury to five persons, four of whom were seriously hurt.

The collision was one of a series of traffic accidents reported in various parts of the city, in which several other persons were hurt, including the Rev. J. L. Clark, 65, assistant to the pastor of Euclid Avenue Baptist church.

The crash of the passenger car and truck occurred when the brake on the left front wheel of the truck locked, swerving the vehicle to the left and into the side of the machine, a sedan.

The truck fell on the sedan, almost slicing it in half and imprisoning the passengers. Police rescuers worked 15 minutes before all were extricated.

The injured, members of a WPA real estate survey party en route to work near Lawrenceville, were taken to Grady hospital. They were listed as William H. Wilder, 24, of 366 Cherokee place, who suffered a fractured skull; Ralph Godby, of 207 East Harvard avenue, College Park, who also suffered a fractured skull; J. C. Helms, 25, of 278 Connecticut avenue, N. E., cuts of the face and body; J. C. Kirkpatrick, 59, of 1334 North avenue, whose skull also was fractured, and Samuel P. Crowell, 53, of 895 Park street, S. W., whose right shoulder was fractured.

H. L. Kilgore, 25, of a Woodward avenue address, listed by police as driver of the truck, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Wilder was driving the sedan, which was proceeding east on Fair street. The truck was traveling west on Fair street, at Terry, when it swerved into the sedan. Kilgore told police he jammed on the brakes to avoid striking another car, and that the brakes locked.

The Rev. Mr. Clark was injured when he was struck down by an automobile on Edgewood avenue, at Spruce street. The clergyman was taken to Grady hospital, in serious condition. He suffered a fractured skull, fractured left leg and possible internal injuries.

Police listed Mrs. O. S. Price, of 122 Cain street, as the driver of the car. The minister lives in an apartment in the church structure at 1120 Euclid avenue. He came here several months ago from Tennessee.

Tot Is Run Down.

In another accident, Ming Lee, three-year-old daughter of Chang Lee, Chinese laundryman of Tenth street, near Peachtree street, was struck by a dairy truck in front of her home. C. C. Turner, driver of a truck, took the injured child to Grady hospital. The name of the truck driver who struck the child was not learned, police said.

Solves Geyser Mystery.

While reports of traffic mishaps came to police headquarters, Motorcycle Patrolman Dudley Elberidge disclosed he had solved the mystery of an automobile collision Thanksgiving Day in which a car was abandoned after it crashed into a fire plug on Savannah street, causing a miniature geyser to spout for an hour.

The motorcycle officer declared he had arrested J. O. Booth, 23, of an Edwards street address, on charges of hit-and-run and reckless driving - accident. Police said Booth admitted leaving the scene of the crash and then reporting the car stolen.

Beware of Rabbits, Grady Head Warns

Caution in the handling of rabbits and other game to guard against the contraction of tularemia was urged by Dr. J. Moss Beeler, superintendent of Grady hospital, yesterday.

Explaining the nature of the disease, its virulence and its effects, Dr. Beeler urged as precautionary measures the wearing of rubber gloves in handling rabbits, either dead or alive; the need from abstaining from rubbing the eyes when skinning the game and the necessity of keeping blood off the bare skin and the thorough cooking of all rabbit meat before eating.

"If hunters and others handling game will use an ounce of prevention, we will be able to avoid some of the many cases of rabbit fever which are now being treated at Grady hospital," he said.

BRIDGE SCORING CHANGE URGED

CLEVELAND, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A proposal to revise drastically in 1940 the present bridge scoring system drew mixed approval and critical comment tonight from expert players at the American Contract Bridge League's national tournament.

The proposal came from the game's national laws commission. William E. McKinney, of New York, commission chairman and executive secretary of the league, said the new features would be tested at various local bridge clubs to determine if they should be adopted for play in the home and at tournaments.

New Sub-Slam.

The commission, with Ely Culbertson concurring, would eliminate the present "major" and "minor" suit game differences, and would create a sub-slam with an undetermined bonus at the five level.

Five tricks, plus the customary "book" of six, now are required for game in clubs and diamonds, while at hearts or spades a game contract requires only four tricks, and notrump three. Under the new plan, game would be four in all suits except notrump, which would be unchanged.

"Off hand, I am not in favor of making the suits of equal rank," said Waldemar Von Zedtwitz, New York city competitor. "While a sub-slam is logical, I fear it will put too great a strain on players, who now have a breathing spell between game and small slam contracts."

Mrs. Culbertson in Favor.

Mrs. Josephine Culbertson declared the change in suit values would be "an excellent idea—I've been in favor of that ever since auction bridge." She was undecided about the sub-slam.

Mrs. R. B. Fuller, of New York, favored the change in minor suits but was against a sub-slam. Mrs. Sam Rush, New York, voiced a sharp "no" to both proposals.

Oswald Jacoby, one of the famed "Four Aces" team, said he would propose another change. For rubber bridge play, mainly in homes, he suggested that as soon as a player bids and makes his game contract, he throw in his hand under an arrangement which would give no extra points for overtricks.

The 28 combinations which started play last night in the national team-of-four championship were reduced tonight to 15 as the players entered the final session.

The leaders were a Philadelphia quartet of Mrs. R. C. Young, Charles Goren, John Crawford, and Charles Solomon, with 34 points.

TVA AREA TERMED DEFENSE WEAPON

Chief Engineer Declares Valley Would Be Ideal for Munitions Center.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Congressional investigators heard today that the government's vast development program in the Tennessee river valley would be a valuable weapon of national defense in time of war.

Theodore B. Parker, chief engineer of TVA, told the senate-house committee investigating the authority that the valley should be one of the leading munitions centers in the United States.

He said Birmingham, Memphis, St. Louis, Chattanooga and Muscle Shoals were protected from attack by air, water and land.

In addition, Parker said, TVA could expand its power production facilities 25 per cent in time of emergency by installation of additional generating equipment. He added also that the area contained such useful war-time material resources as coal, iron ore, limestone, and salt.

The national defense discussion developed after Parker testified that a study of the cost of the tripartite program had shown that 52 per cent had gone to power development, 28 per cent to navigation and 20 per cent to flood control.

The Democratic Process Flowers: Church To Vote on Pastors Status

Membership List at Inconium Baptist Purged for Ballot on Retention of Pastor Tomorrow; Referendum Was Decided Upon After Court Ouster Action Was Filed.

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

The membership list was purged last night—deacons and the pastor were drawing their lines tautly—all was ready for the court and election to be held, instead of preaching, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Inconium Baptist church, in the famous Pittsburgh section of Atlanta. For months strife has mounted; fires of resentment have smoldered, and at long last the question is to be decided.

The simple issue on which the 200-odd members of the congregation are to vote is whether the Rev. William B. Bell, pastor for 18 years, shall be retained or a younger man called to the pulpit.

Deacons and members threw the matter into the lap of the Fulton county superior court in October. The first action, a temporary injunction, to prevent Pastor Bell from entering the church, was signed by Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, Judge Eugene D. Thomas, himself a leading Baptist, however, caught the case on the rebound.

W. W. Gaines, life deacon of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church and chairman of the Fulton county board of registrars, was forthwith named referee.

That resulted in the call for the election, over which Gaines will preside. The entire congregation was invited to vote. Problems presented themselves. Who were members in good standing? Would the vote be restricted solely to members of the congregation?

The pastor and the deacons finally decided to canvass the membership and agree on who could vote. That now has been done.

The name of every member will be called and he or she will be asked to vote. Under Gaines' eagle eye each vote will be recorded.

If a majority votes to keep Bell, who is moderator and also led building of the church, he will stay. If the balloting turns against him, and a majority vote for his resignation, he has agreed to retire.

ITALIAN ATTACKS ANGER THE BRITISH

with Britain as well as France. France was quick to realize this complication and the French ambassador, Charles Andre Corbin, informed Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax early today that the French expect Britain to stand by them in dealing with Italy's threats.

Chamberlain will come under fire in the house of commons Monday when Robert Pilkington, Conservative, raises the question of Britain's commitments by asking the prime minister whether Britain's pledge of status quo in the Mediterranean covers Tunisia, Corsica and Nice.

Arthur Henderson, Laborite leader, will ask Chamberlain for assurance that the Anglo-Italian pact of friendship does not weaken Britain's obligations to help France in event of conflict.

He will ask Chamberlain to cancel his "appeasement mission" to Rome, scheduled for early January at Premier Benito Mussolini's invitation, unless the Italian anti-French propaganda ceases.

DALADIER PRESSES FOR LABOR PEACE

PARIS, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Threatened by the colonial ambitions of both Italy and Germany, Premier Daladier today sought the internal political and social peace he considers essential to the defense of the world's second largest colonial empire.

NEW TYPE DESIGNS FOR NAVY FAVORED

General Board Overrules Critics of Equipment in Report to Swanson.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Military circles heard today that the Navy's general board had endorsed new type engineering equipment which figured in a long-smouldering controversy over warship designs and construction delays.

Overruling critics of the equipment, an official report to Secretary Swanson this week recommended use of high pressure, super-heat boilers in the Navy's six new 35,000-ton battleships, among other craft.

Secretary Swanson had referred the controversy to the board after reports of a shakeup of inspection and survey board officers reached President Roosevelt's attention.

The general board decided, informed persons said, that the new type power plants were more efficient and economical than other designs and gave the warships added cruising range.

The disclosure coincided with indications that the construction controversy might reach congress. Representative Maas, Republican, Minnesota, ranking minority member of the house naval committee, expressed the opinion the Navy Department "needs some kind of a shakeup."

HITLER SAYS YOUNG LOVE THEIR BONDS

'They Never Will Be Free,' Fuehrer Tells Rally of Sudetens.

REICHENBERG, Germany, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler told 30,000 Sudetenland Germans in a 55-minute campaign speech today that he was not worried about the future of Nazism because "the new generation is growing up and we are educating it."

The Fuehrer described all the various youth organizations in which young Germans are enrolled and said "they never will be free in their entire lives."

"And they are happy about it," he continued. "All the ridiculous prejudices, about which their fathers still may worry, slowly disappear from their vision. They see everything in a different light."

He said boys and girls first come into the Nazi organization at the age of ten, progress through the Hitler youth, Black Guards and Storm Troops, then through the works service and the army and then back into the Black Guards and Storm Troops.

Hitler declared that German youth could not escape National Socialism, and that by his "plan" the idea of National Socialism and the commonwealth would be drilled into them from birth to death.

He devoted his entire talk to internal affairs, but sidestepped the Jewish issue.

He outlined his economic program based on an increase of production rather than on an increase of pay. "Whatever more goods are produced accrue to the entire people," he said.

"Any idiot," continued the Fuehrer, "can print money if he is unscrupulous enough... my four-year plan is more difficult but better."

THIS MUST BE STOPPED!

Atlanta has, in the last few weeks, been confronted with a wave of hit-and-run accidents, in which the drivers of automobiles have fled the scene of accident in the hope of avoiding punishment, or notoriety.

There are few crimes more cowardly or heinous than that of fleeing from the scene of an accident in which a person has been injured. The driver of an automobile who has been permitted the privilege of the highways and streets assumes, in return, certain duties; among these are the exercise of reasonable caution and the succor of any person or persons who might be injured by the driver in the exercise of this privilege. Any deviation from these duties must be met with stern and swift measures by authorities responsible for the safety of the streets. Thirteen hit-and-run cases in the city over one week end, followed by others in a regularity which indicates general disregard of the law, place upon the established authorities a responsibility for action which the public has a right to demand.

It is the duty of every citizen to co-operate with these authorities in the apprehension of those responsible, after which it becomes the duty of the courts to impose punishment which will take into consideration the enormity of the crime.

The city is faced with the task of ruthless suppression of hit-and-run accidents, and none must be surprised if punishment appears out of proportion to the individual crime involved. The avoidance of punishment must rest with the individual alone. If he would take human life wantonly, and then attempt to avoid his responsibility, the penalty must be swift and severe.

Basically, responsibility for a condition which gives occasion for such disregard of law rests in the governing body of the city. Mayor Hartsfield has been forced to the extremity of asking assistance of the general public in securing adequate and sensible traffic laws. The city maintains and trains intelligent public servants familiar with civic needs, yet finds an untrained, political body withholding the power of correction. The mayor has presented to the public his conception of the needs of the city, and has asked that co-operation which will be necessary to alleviate the conditions of which all complain, but which persist because of political considerations. The present status of traffic law enforcement requires such a concentration of police manpower that adequate enforcement of other laws is handicapped. Therefore, the city finds wanton disregard of authority while an expensive police force is concentrated on the task of keeping streets clear for the passage of ordinary traffic.

The city must enforce laws if anarchy is not to prevail. Hit-and-run drivers at large are a danger to every person who uses the streets of Atlanta. Yet the city cannot expect adequate enforcement unless political and other considerations are removed from the regulation of the traffic problem.

FORESEEN CONTINGENCIES

It is seldom insurance companies are found to have failed to provide for even the most remote contingency. Warning may be taken, therefore, from recent additions to the classification of causes of death. The international conference which designates these causes has decreed that "poison gas" and "wounds in bombardments" be added to the more commonplace list now used.

This, because delegates believed that in time of war it will be necessary, in classifying mortality, to take account of deaths from these causes among civilians.

The inclusion of "poison gas" may raise the question of its having been "outlawed" in modern warfare. Technically speaking, it has been. Yet the mad scramble in the last war for scarce precious masks would indicate a disbelief, on the part of all Europe, in observance of the ban.

Then, too, there is a little book entitled "The War of the Future," written by retired Lieutenant General Max Schwartz, in which the German officer declares "ruthlessness in the superlative degree will characterize the next war." He adds "nothing will be neglected to break the morale of the civil population—no laws of humanity, no international law, will be kept . . . necessity knows no laws."

With perfect frankness, he declares "It would be an utter delusion to believe that any state capable of producing poison gas will refrain from making and using it, no matter what previous agreements have been made to the contrary."

The insurance companies apparently feel the same way. There remains the pleasant thought that the insurance companies, at least, are prepared.

INTERPRETIVE REPORTING

For newspapermen there is a deep, vicarious thrill when a member of the craft presents an outstanding job of reporting and analysis culled from his day-by-day work. By its very nature, reporting in the past has precluded more than a modicum of objective writing. It has been almost an unwritten law that the profession leave to the so-called experts the field of interpretation. Happily, however, the newspaperman today is turning more and more to this type of reporting, and his performance, generally speaking, more truly presents the events which form the complete picture.

Such a masterful job is presented in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post by Demaree Bess, a New York Times correspondent in Europe. He presents an analysis of the events surrounding the Munich conference, in the light of their meaning to the United States, which is based on his long experience and study in the European scene and the appearance of the principals after the surrender of Czechoslovakia by the Old World democracies.

Following the conference at Munich, the opinion was expressed by The Constitution that peace would not be the result, but that a crop had been sown which would be later reaped in blood. It was said also it was well that the United States remain aloof from any entanglements which would entail another expeditionary force from this country. Subsequent events have borne out this expression, with further confirmation in the article of Mr. Bess.

It is known now that the conference represented an abject surrender to power on the part of the British and French governments. It is probable the surrender was made because of the attitude of the American public against becoming embroiled in another European war. America was betrayed following the World War when the Allies imposed terrible peace terms, and there was little doubt in the minds of Chamberlain and Daladier that their countries would have to go it alone to pay the price of the Versailles treaty. There was, however, considerable sentiment in this country against the Fascist nations and for the dispatch of war materials to the democracies. This is as it should be, providing the dispatch is hedged about with ample safeguards against the sending of American men to supplement the materials. It is hard to see how Americans could deny these countries materials.

But Mr. Bess finds now that various forces within and without the United States are preaching that Fascism must be stopped before it gets too strong—the doctrine of preventive war—and that America should join with France and England in this holy crusade. Perhaps even Russia, when Stalin can be matched in a ring with Hitler and show him tricks he never knew.

He very properly points out that the governments of European nations are traditionally self-seeking, that ingrained habits of power politics constitute a philosophy utterly foreign to the democracy we know in the United States. He presents a powerful argument against any embroilment by the United States so long as these conditions remain. He points out that the Atlantic ocean is still running by the front door of the United States and that it is a pretty big hurdle even for an all-powerful Fascism.

All this is not to say, however, that the nation should not prepare for just such an eventuality. This requires a navy strong enough to match that of a probable foe, plus a mobile, well-trained, well-equipped—though not necessarily large—army for an impregnable defense. Given these things, plus a resolution to let Europe pull its own chestnuts out of the fire, America can stand aloof.

As usual, a crisis finds our national defense in a sad state of inadequacy. Only the hockey goalie is armed to the teeth, as the times require.

And so, we assume, the sealing of a solemn pact by which France and Germany renounce war on each other was signalled by a minute's silence in the gun factories.

In the lost and found department, poor Europe asks the return of her small pet, answering to the name of Appeasement and last seen with a man with a mustache.

Editorial of the Day

TO HEAR THEM ALL

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer)

One of the first moves by majority leaders when Congress assembles in January will be toward a broad liberalization of the Social Security Act. Amendments estimated to bring an additional 16,000,000 persons under its protection are discussed as probable.

This is the answer of the administration to advocates of a variety of grandiose pension schemes which Congress will be asked to approve.

It is agreed that social security is here to stay. That the present act needs revision is likewise widely believed. And its liberalization is by no means the only step desirable to make it more serviceable. There is, for instance, the matter of the "reserve account" which most contributors assumed was an accumulating fund usable for the future payment of old-age benefits; whereas, in fact, contributions to it are used like other taxes to help pay the running expense of the federal government.

Advocates of pension plans are confident that harvest days are at hand. The so-called general welfare bill, which many Townsends have endorsed as probably the nearest they can come to the original $200-a-month plan, is among the measures congressmen will find awaiting them.

Unless some one in authority vetoes the suggestion, the House ways and means committee will open the door to consideration of all these pension proposals. This marks a departure from the policy of the last session when the "short cuts to Utopia" were bottled up and the agonized cries of their advocates ignored.

If a suggested piece of legislation is by its nature unsound or dangerous, perhaps the best way to acquaint the public with the fact is to give its adherents a hearing. Keeping it in a committee pigeon hole may save valuable time, but it is not a good method of persuasion.

It will be proposed that the act be extended to include farm laborers and domestic servants, the self-employed, seamen and others not now covered; the start of the old-age annuity operations may be moved forward from 1942 to 1940; the payment to those retiring in the early years of the system may be increased. Greater economy in administration is one purpose included which the country will hail with approval.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

HASTINGS AND HOOVER WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Dan Hastings, the genial little Delaware old guardman who used to be known as "the senator from du Pont," has the friends of Herbert Hoover to thank for his new place on the Republican national committee's executive committee. Sources close to the former president strenuously deny his complicity in the maneuver by which Hastings was chosen and Kenneth F. Simpson, New York's new national committeeman, was firmly set-tracked. But the Hoover friends acted with effective unanimity.

Simpson, whose shrewd compromises with political reality have salvaged New York Republicanism, is pure poison to Hoover. In the first place, Hoover hates the Simpson compromises. In the second, he bears a natural personal enmity to Simpson, for Simpson has repeatedly denounced the former president's influence in the Republican party.

STORY OF A MANEUVER The maneuver against Simpson began when Mrs. John T. Pratt, the charming national committeewoman from New York, intimated that she would be a candidate for the place on the national committee's executive committee. Normally, it would have gone to Simpson, for it has belonged almost by right to New York's male member of the national committee. Mrs. Pratt's candidacy had been suggested to her some months before. She disclosed it to Hoover some time before the national committee meeting, so that he was at least in part aware of what was up.

Mrs. Pratt is as close a friend, both political and personal, as the former president has. Therefore, when she made her intention known to Simpson, he immediately decided to raise the Hoover issue at the national committee meeting. Simpson telephoned Tom Dewey in Bermuda, told him of what he planned to do, and received his hearty approval. Such was the posture of affairs when the New York state committee's executive committee met in Albany.

Simpson went to Albany in the confident expectation that his nomination as the new national committeeman would be virtually unopposed, and that his ally, Ed Jaekle, of Buffalo, would be cheerfully accepted as chairman of the state executive body. He found the fullness of the situation. Mrs. Pratt did not attend, but her proxy was in the hands of the Simpson opposition. Two conservative upstate leaders who had half-promised support came out against Simpson. An executive committee member representing Hoover's crony, William Hill, the leader of the southern tier of New York counties, had joined the junta. Alan Fox, a New York lawyer who is almost as close to Hoover as Mrs. Pratt, was on hand helping to rally the anti-Simpsonites.

In the end, the anti-Simpsonites were licked. Simpson was nominated to the national committee by a vote of eleven to eight, and his ally, Jaekle, was made chairman of the state executive body of a slightly larger majority, subsequently made unanimous. But the discord within the New York organization had been dramatized.

A GRATIFYING RESULT Having been accepted as national committeeman, he remained for Simpson to get the traditional New York place on the national committee's executive committee. Mrs. Pratt's candidacy, plus the news of the Albany row and the troubles which had preceded it, made this impossible. Dan Hastings was a candidate also. The Hooverites and other conservatives on the national committee disliked Simpson anyway. The conflict between Simpson and Mrs. Pratt, and Simpson and the conservative element in the state organization, gave an excuse for passing Simpson over. The word was circulated, "a vote for Hastings is a vote for party harmony," and Simpson was beaten even before he arrived in Washington.

A canvass showed that Simpson had almost no votes. Triumphant anti-Simpsonites presented the result to Henry Prather Fletcher, former national committee chairman, who is friendly to Simpson and strong for Tom Dewey. Fletcher then arranged the compromise by which neither Simpson's nor Mrs. Pratt's name was presented to the national committee meeting. The result, being a defeat of his most open enemy, must have gratified Hoover as much as his friends no doubt hoped.

Simpson's defeat also gratified the entire reactionary group of Republicans, who hate Simpson for his shrewdly opportunistic alliance with the American Labor party. To be sure, without that alliance Tom Dewey would not have been elected district attorney, and the Republicans would not have controlled the recent New York constitutional convention. Had the Democrats controlled the convention, they could have redistricted the Republican party out of existence in New York. But, then, the Republican extremists prefer death to dishonor.

Shedding
Inhibitions.

Ever since that stage and screen play "Can't Take It With You" flashed into the American consciousness, there has been more or less discussion about the advisability of doing whatever you are impelled to, regardless of sneers or laughter of the orthodox in society.

I was reading, the other day, a brief biography of a Frenchman, named Alfred Jarry, who died in Paris at the age of 34. The biography was written by Matthew Josephson, forming the introduction to a most out-of-the-way piece of literature, a book written by Jarry.

Now Jarry, of course, had an advantage over most of us when it comes to the shedding of inhibitions. For he lived in the Latin Quarter of Paris, in a society that regarded the fantastic as the most to be emulated. But some of the things Jarry did are worth writing about, merely for fun and for human interest.

He had a habit, for instance, of frequenting the cafes and the bars of the Quartier and its liberalization was by no means the only step desirable to make it more serviceable. There is, for instance, the matter of the "reserve account" which most contributors assumed was an accumulating fund usable for the future payment of old-age benefits; whereas, in fact, contributions to it are used like other taxes to help pay the running expense of the federal government.

The Stranger
From South America.

One night Jarry was telling, in lurid detail, about a whole series of murders he claimed to have perpetrated. A total stranger, on the other side of the cafe, overheard him and came over to Jarry's table. The stranger introduced himself as a visitor from South America and expressed great admiration of Jarry, as he appeared to be, as well as for the crimes he had described.

Jarry fired his revolver over the stranger's shoulder and into the ceiling of the place.

So he was hustled outside and there his friends disarmed him.

"Alas," said Jarry, afterwards, "in the confusion I forgot to pay my bill."

Which had been the purpose of the entire affair!

When A Man Dies.

Jarry at last fell ill, caused by the wild excesses in which he had, all his adult life, indulged. Feeling he was going to die, he left Paris and returned to his old home in the country of southern France. At that time, however, his writings and his fame had not penetrated far beyond exclusive circles in Paris and he wrote to a friend that the people of his home neighborhood did not appreciate the beauty of his gesture in "going home to die."

To his apparent disappointment, however, he did not die, at that time. He said it ruined his plans, not to succumb as he had expected, that it was an anti-climax, as it were. Anyway, he returned to Paris and one year later, did die, in a hospital.

For that final year of his life his digestive system was said to be so diseased he could eat no solid food whatever. A friend said he believed Jarry lived, for the entire year, on alcohol only.

A friend visited him in the hospital, the day before he died, and asked if there was any favor he could perform, anything he could get, and Jarry answered, in a faint voice, "Yes, give me a toothpick."

Then he raised in the bed and, propped up, proceeded to pick his teeth as though he had just eaten a hearty meal. Certainly. But a buffet with that certain touch. A direct descendant, in spirit, of Rabelais and Montaigne. A comic and a ferocious rebel against the conventions, who has left for us a book that's all for a life's work. Books vastly entertaining, but books which, you realize as you read, Jarry himself would have been the last to take seriously.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Wednesday, December 3, 1913:

"Congressman William Schley Howard leaves Atlanta this morning for Washington. Before the end of this week Congressman Howard will introduce a privilege resolution in the house calling for a congressional investigation of the administration now in charge of the federal penitentiary located here."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Monday, December 3, 1888:

"Colonel Elliott Shepard, the hypocritical ass who edits the New York Mail and Express, is making another exposure of himself. In a recent editorial article, he turns his blood-shot eyes in the direction of this section and furiously enquires of the south: 'Do you want war?' The blooming idiot then goes on like Pecksniff in a new incarnation."

Broke His Back.

George Royster, 45-year-old farmer, Boone, Ia., broke his back, but still considers himself lucky.

He fell from the roof of a corn crib and landed in the pig pen. A piece of metal fell with him that covered him and kept the hogs from attacking him.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Is It To Be In the current "Who's Who" Mayor Ickes? Harold L. Ickes gives his residence as Winnetka, Ill., but this petty technicality could hardly deter a New Dealer from running for mayor of Chicago. The intimation that he might, coming from his office in Washington, is highly stimulating.

Surely the Chicago Tribune could not object on this ground, although it surely would on many others. For the Tribune itself, with a Hitleresque appetite for territory and Anschluss, long ago projected a map of an imaginary realm which it calls Chicagoland, extending from a point beyond Milwaukee on the north, past Des Moines on the west and including St. Louis, Indianapolis and the outskirts of Detroit.

In the racial sense, therefore, Mr. Ickes may claim to be almost a pure Chicagoan, with just a trace of suburban blood in his veins, and certainly no less Chicagoan than Colonel Robert R. McCormick, the realm leader who lives aloof in a Berchtesgaden of his own well beyond the corporate limits of the realm capital.

Similar To The map of Chi-

Italian Chart bled that audacious chart of the Italian empire-to-be which stands on a wall in Rome to inflame the ambition and historic pride of patriotic bricklayers slogging home in wet shoes in the dusk of cold winter days. It is similar in its appeal to the maps of the great new Germany as flaunted before the eyes of muscle-conscious Heinies, maps which, incidentally, overlap Mussolini's maps of the Italian empire-to-be in certain cherished areas.

Chicagoland is vast and as yet unconquered, but great batches of Sudeten, as they might be called, in communities far from the city borders, have been heartened by propaganda on the air and in print for years to endure exile bravely until that happy day when the colonel will rescue them from Hoosier and Hawkeye oppressors and unite them in the proud and privileged bond of Chicagones.

Worse Things Of the political

Have Happened feasibility of the Ickes candidacy I know nothing, but certainly stranger and much worse things have happened in Chicago. Mr. Ickes is a down-the-line New Dealer, and if the radical-conservative tussle in the party continues would seem to deserve the President's support, should he really want the job.

He is also ornery, disagreeable and socially bilious and in a campaign for elective office would probably use the unique spectacle of a man snarling, not smiling, at the crowds; a man not begging for office, but condescending to serve, should they summon the intelligence to choose him. He wouldn't be likely to speak of the bright intelligence apparent in their faces or of their indubitable character. It would be more like him to tell them they looked stupid and had shown a lack of character in their toleration of crime in office since the memory of no man living runneth to the contrary.

Yet by such a campaign, the only sort of campaign that Mr. Ickes, with his nature, is capable of waging, he just might whip Chicago into a rage against guilty submission in times past and against the whole evil procession of knaves who have robbed the city of government, and civic self-respect.

That, incidentally, was Hitler's early method. He insulted them; he called them slaves, fools and worms, and rasped them with his scorn for enduring ignominy.

Yearning for The people of Mean Reformer cago have had handshakes and robbery that there, too, just of late, have been murmurs of a yearning for not a dictator, of course, but a mean reformer, whose wrath would know no brother nor even an alderman. Mr. Ickes would be mean enough. Even pass him the time of the evening at a dinner where he stands off in a corner scowling and chewing his under lip and he will think you are trying to offend him. Offer your hand and he will grab your wrist to see if you aren't trying to slip him $10. But he can be guaranteed not to steal, although he might sleep in the office to save room rent, and he won't let anyone else steal a dollar because he would count up in person, lock the safe and cock the trap-gun every night before turning in.

Of course, under Mr. Ickes it might be worth a man's life to try to enter a State street department store through the picket lines or dive through the chimneys of half-bricks from the chimneys along the line, for he wouldn't abhor a little harmless labor mischief in the general shaking up.

But if it is reform they want in Chicago, a mayor who would clean out every seam and cranny of the flea-bag known as the city hall, honest Harold, the house dick of the New Deal, is their man.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

HOW OLD IS VOCATIONAL EDUCATION? ST. LOUIS, Dec. 2.—Last night about 2,000 men and women, representing the vocational educational work of the nation, sat at dinner in a great dining room of a St. Louis hotel. The national president, Tilton H. Quigley, of the Georgia School of Technology, reminded them that 24 years ago the convention had been held in St. Louis and asked that all those who had attended it and again were present to stand. More than a dozen stood.

He reminded them the first national convention was held 30 years ago and asked those who had attended it and who again were in attendance at St. Louis to stand. Four men stood, bridging a gap of more than a quarter of a century. They received a merited ovation. "And yet," said President Quigley, "there are those who say vocational education is a new thing."

To one unfamiliar with what is going on in vocational education, it was interesting to see the national aspect of this work. It was absorbing, too, to see what St. Louis has done. There are two fine vocational and trade schools in St. Louis.

Since only about 20 per cent of the graduates of high schools go on to college, it ought to be obvious those who attend high school and receive no practical training for a job leave school with a very definite handicap. There ought not to be any conflict between the two systems, the general system and the vocational system, but rather a very generous and whole-hearted co-operation.

THE BETTER CHANCE There likely will be a change in legislative approach in the matter of rural air programs. It must be admitted the average adult tenant isn't good material with which to work. I speak of the average, not the exceptional cases. The man who has started down hill isn't the real hope.

The agrarian south and the industrial south, which are sure to develop as soon as conditions make it possible for the south to become the number one economic opportunity of the nation, will need trained men in industry and in agriculture.

There already is being produced in the south, and especially in Georgia, where the set-up is very fine, some outstanding young vocational agricultural graduates. They are real hope. The next legislature ought to look forward to giving them loans to buy machinery and stock, either on their father's farm or on a rented farm, and to look farther toward making them a better people.

It is obvious that no matter how much help is given a people they cannot use it unless they know how. I have heard people criticize, and very justly from one point of view, tenants and cropper farmers who tore up improved houses, who slaughtered brood stock, who let newly plowed terraces wash away. It was forgotten that to take advantage of those things they first should have understood them. So, regardless of how much help is given, it inevitably must flow through education channels.

YOU GET AN IDEA OF AMERICA Last night at the dinner given for this national convention of the American Vocational Association, I talked with St. Louis' progressive mayor, Bernard Dickman, one-time United States marine. He now is serving his second term as mayor of St. Louis and looks good for a third.

St. Louis does things for her citizens. St. Louis has her troubles and problems. But this thing she does do. The tax rate is $2.76 on each assessed $100.

Of each $2.76 cents, 2 cents goes to the municipal zoo, 2 cents to the municipal art museum and 4 cents to the municipal library. The rest of it is divided up between schools and city departments. This means that the money is sent to the city hall and the city saw the parks, the zoo, and the museum of art. There apparently is no politics about them. I suppose there must be, but then they are so well run, politics do not hurt them. The museum is magnificent. It contains some very real art treasures. Some of them are good enough to be asked for in Paris and London when there are exhibits of special importance. The zoo is very worth while. The parks are beautiful and the jewel house, a tall glass house in which grow marvelous flowers and trees, is an attraction worth going far to see.

The mayor has his problems. St. Louis needs money like any American city. But Mayor Dickman believes in the museum, the parks, the zoo and the libraries.

"You get a real idea of America here," he said. "We just now are realizing what the pioneers gave us. We want to make this city worth while."

AND ONE DOES GET AN IDEA They still are fighting to get started on the Jefferson memorial, which will cause the removal of 30 city blocks along the waterfront. There started all the old trails west. There started the Lewis and Clark expedition. Here came La Salle, Marquette, the Daniel Boone trail, the trail to California—they all started here.

Here was held the Fred Scott slave trial; here came Abraham Lincoln and Robert E. Lee, who built the levee; U. S. Grant, and all who traveled. In those days all who traveled came to St. Louis.

Here was completed the formal transfer of the Louisiana purchase. I saw the actual papers of that transfer. Go read Claude Bowers' book, "Jefferson in Power," and learn how many in congress rallied at Jefferson for buying such a worthless lot of wilderness and paying a few millions for it. One does get an idea of America here.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

My Dear Louise:

Your approval of young Vanderbilt's article in a well-known magazine isn't surprising. We usually approve the judgment of those who praise us. And I have no doubt of his accuracy when he says our present-day young people are decent and well-behaved. He spent several months driving over the country to observe youngsters at play, in lake and mountain resorts, at tourist camps and dance halls, and he ought to know.

But however dependable he may be as a reporter of facts, he is poison when he begins to offer opinions. He says modern girls avoid sex immorality because they consider it a mistake, but it isn't the kind of mistake that does irreparable damage. Despite the old "prattle" of "colossally ignorant" people, a girl can make such a blunder without any soul-searing and lasting damage.

That kind of philosophy, I repeat, is poison. There are people—criminals for the most part—who deliberately do wrong in the full knowledge that it is wrong. If the voice

CANCER CONTROL EDUCATION DRIVE LAUNCHED HERE

Women's Field Army
Plans Third Annual Campaign To Eradicate
Fear of Disease in State.

The Georgia division, women's field army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, inaugurated its third annual educational campaign for cancer control yesterday.

Attending the session, presided over by Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, state commander, were vice commanders from the 10 congressional districts and representatives of the state medical association and the state board of health.

The campaign will be based on a program designed to impress upon the public that the disease, in its early stages, is not incurable and to instill a psychology of hope instead of despair. Mrs. Ritchie said. Workers in the field army, which is a voluntary organization, also will stress the urgency of studying preliminary symptoms and the need for physical examinations.

Reporting on the campaign last year, Mrs. Ritchie announced that the Georgia division had been cited by the national association as having excelled in three major fields—the educational campaign, total of publicity received and co-operation accorded the medical forces and state board of health in its cancer control program.

Plans were discussed for holding a state-wide meeting of organizations interested in cancer control here in February, at which time Dr. C. C. Little, managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, would speak. The meeting will be held simultaneously with that of the Southern Surgical Congress.

District vice commanders present yesterday were Mrs. C. A. DeLoatch, Savannah; Mrs. Gordon Chason, Bainbridge; Mrs. J. M. Murrell, Columbus; Mrs. W. E. H. Seery Jr., Griffin; Mrs. Frank Dennis, Eatonton; Mrs. W. A. Hill, Calhoun; Mrs. C. M. Thomas, Waycross; Mrs. J. O. Braselton, Braselton, and Mrs. Stewart Brown, Royston.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

LYING

Sunday's lesson, the ninth Commandment, reads, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Exodus 20:16. The golden text is taken from Psalms 51:6, "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts." And Jesus declares, "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies—these are the things which defile a man," Matthew 15:19-20.

If we are to obey the ninth Commandment, we must desire hearts of truth. That seems to be the lesson of the lesson. If our tongues are to speak no guile, we must have hearts of righteousness. The tongue may either be a fire—the very fire of hell, or it may be the messenger of kindness and truth. What is in our hearts determines what we say—whether we bear false witness against God and our neighbors and the truth—or whether we speak the truth in love.

How do we bear false witness? By starting or repeating false statements, either in spoken word or writing. There are countless ways in which we may violate the ninth Commandment. Even in silence we may bear false witness!

Slander is one of the grossest sins, causing misery and grief that oft can not be overcome. Slander is like thistles—easily scattered, difficult to recover. It goes with the wind, finding lodgment and fruitage in many kinds of soils. One recalls the old story of a teacher who took a child into the open on a windy day, carrying under his arm a pillow stuffed with feathers. When they had walked well into the open, the teacher ripped the pillow and let the feathers scatter. The gusts of wind caught up the feathers and carried them away. "Can you catch the feathers now?" asked the teacher. "Never, I fear," replied the child. "And so it is with every false word spoken," said the wise teacher.

Paul, in his letter to the Ephesians, gives us the principle by which we may obey the ninth Commandment. "Wherefore, putting away falsehood, speak ye the truth each one with his neighbor; for we are members one of another." We cannot grow the lilies of heaven, except we get the bulbs from the garden of God. Hatred for sin must come from God, and strength by which we are to speak the truth will be given unto everyone that trusteth in Him.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Sing a song of breakfast,
A paper full of news,
Potted perorations, other people's views:
When the subject's opened
We're eager to discuss,
There's nothing like the papers
For the likes of us..."

We couldn't help being pleased with what Dr. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, said the other day about newspapers. "If you can find something on every page of your morning newspaper that interests you," he told the Chicago Executives Club, "then you are enormously vital and alive." What a slogan Dr. Phelps has given circulation departments! For that run-down feeling take Vitamins A, B, C, D, Z, or what-other-vitamins-have-you! For testing the vitamins, read your morning newspaper! If it doesn't interest you, don't blame the paper—you just need more or different vitamins! You're not sufficiently alive!

If turnips were watches, we could all tell time. "If a low-priced automobile were built the way the average house is assembled," says the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, "it probably would cost the buyer at least $15,000." Agreed that automobiles and houses are built differently, are there any other differences between automobiles and houses? Prof. Quiz wants to know. Oh, yes—automobiles run and houses just sit and think.

Still another difference is that so many people in these days had rather have an automobile than a house. Another is that because of the mobile civilization the automobile and other machines have brought about, a great many people can't manage to stay in one place long enough to make having a house worth while. Still another is that a hangover from ancient and more individualistic days shakes people resent having their houses exactly like their neighbor's even if their automobiles are. And one more is that automobiles can take you to so many places in comparison with which home is a bore.

If these profundities on the housing problem help the automobile people understand why houses aren't manufactured and assembled the way automobiles are, then this column is less than a daily total loss.

From Atlanta a lady who is as postmodern as we are in weariness with jazz and swing and in joy for their increasing eclipse reminds us of what the great G. K. Chesterton had to say about the plate-rattling, soup-spilling, conversation-smothering, nerve-wracking, digestion-ruining type of music offered with meals in certain other-wise elegant places: "Of all modern phenomena," wrote Mr. Chesterton, "the most monstrous and ominous, the most manifestly rotting with disease, the most grimly prophetic of destruction, the most clearly and unmistakably inspired by evil spirits, the most instantly and awfully overshadowed by the wrath of Heaven, the most near to madness and moral chaos, the most vivid with devilry and despair, is the practice of having to listen to loud music while eating a meal in a restaurant."

Mr. Chesterton was opposing the practice of having to listen to loud music while eating a meal in a restaurant.

The Richmond Times Dispatch quotes Baron Ernst von der Decken, German son of an ancient and noble family and a "feature writer for the official German press," as saying in Richmond recently that there is a spiritual affinity between southern United States and Germany. There is indeed, but it does not behoove a representative of "official" Germany to say so. The affinity is with nothing of official nor with anything Prussian. It is with the Germans of Germany's own south, the Bavarian, Austrian and Bohemian Germans who love music and home and friends and good food and good cheer, who are of no kin to the marching - and-murdering regime officials in Berlin.

King Cotton on Way Back, Says Expert

Alabama Specialist Foresees Day New Uses Place Staple on Throne Again Throughout South

By LUKE GREENE.

Restoration of a portion of King Cotton's lost empire is possible through the discovery of new uses for the south's No. 1 crop, in the opinion of Dr. A. R. Macormac, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The little man, whose horn-rimmed glasses dominate his animated face, sat in a downtown hotel room yesterday and visioned the rebuilding of that empire. He saw vast stretches of white-laden fields, but instead of pickanninies bent over the stalks plucking the bursting bolls, he saw machines harvesting the crop like hay. He outlined 55 suggested new uses for the product.

Here for Meeting.

Dr. Macormac is attending the eighth annual meeting of the American Association of Textile Chemists and Colorists.

The scientist thinks there is a possibility women soon may be wearing cotton stockings with as much style as they now wear silk and rayon hose.

"Women used to wear cotton lyle stockings," he said, "and strength of them tell me they prefer cotton because it wears easier. The key to the problem lies in spinning the cotton so as to produce a finer yarn."

Stronger Cellophane.

Dr. Macormac also sees the feasibility of producing artificial leather by coating cotton cloth with synthetic resin. And for those who prefer to wrap their products in cellophane, he has a plan for re-enforcing cellophane with cotton cloth of a net-like structure to keep it from tearing or cracking.

Much has been said and written about the use of cotton in road building. Dr. Macormac has also studied that phase of research. He thinks raw cotton might be incorporated with cement to increase its toughness and strength. "I think we could use cellulose pulp in beaverboard, wallboard, and fireproof shingles in the same way," he said. "It's the same principal as using iron rods to re-enforce cement."

The scientist has an idea that should make life rosy again for women who shun sweets because of fear of added weight. He says that from cottonseed bran can be extracted a product called xylitol, which is a fattening material that is not fattening.

He outlined results of his findings to the convention yesterday. The program will continue today and will be concluded with a banquet at 7 o'clock tonight at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Senator Walter F. George will be principal speaker.

C. G. Worthington of the Georgia School of Technology, will be one of the speakers at the session this morning. His subject will be "Flax—Its Agricultural and Industrial Possibilities."

SALES TAX WEIGHED BY COUNTY LEADERS

Second District Commissioners Discuss Revenue Problem.

ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 2.—(AP)—C. A. Matthews, president of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners, said today a sales tax "appears to be the only tax which will raise sufficient revenue" to carry out the state's program and replace losses suffered by the counties this year.

Addressing a meeting of second district commissioners, Matthews predicted a curtailment of public services unless the next legislature compensated for the reduced income resulting from homestead and personality exemptions.

Loss of Revenue. He estimated treasury receipts might be cut more than $2,500,000 because of the open forum, and said the Association of County Commissioners would support Governor Rivers and the assembly in their efforts to solve the financial problem.

Matthews made the sales tax suggestion after asserting that various other proposals would leave the state's revenue "far short" of its needs. He commented, however, that "everyone seems to be a bit timid about a sales tax."

The second district meeting closed with an open forum where the possibility of convicting being furloughed at Christmas time, the commissioners were told there was no concerted movement for such a plan.

Several members of the State Board of Penal Administration attended the session and discussed phases of the state's prison program. Chairman A. O. Blacklock, of the board, emphasized the importance of sending boys to reformatory rather than to penitentiaries, and the commissioners were urged to take up this matter with judges.

Referring to recent criticism of the prison and parole commission, Judge G. A. Johns said much of it was "based on misinformation." "Find out the facts before you criticize," he advised.

'ROASTING DEATHS' TRIAL IS POSTPONED

Attempts to Sway Witnesses Hinted.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A suggestion of attempts to influence convict witnesses in the Philadelphia county prison "baking death" case came from the prosecution today as a state supreme court order caused postponement of the trials of 10 former prison officials on murder and manslaughter charges.

Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle told the court he had been informed at least one post-official mentioned paroles to convicts summoned to testify about events last August when four men perished in super-heated punishment cells.

The postponement came on a request by former Deputy Warden Frank A. Craven that he and his attorneys be permitted to interview 21 survivors of the heat.

BOTTLERS ELECT WILBUR H. GLENN

Georgia Association Hears Senator George Score Illegal Fund Use.

Wilbur H. Glenn, of Columbus, was elected president of the Georgia Bottlers' Association at the closing session of the organization's annual convention yesterday. He succeeds Fred L. Cannon, of Atlanta, who served two terms.

A. L. Crawford, of Corvallis, was named vice president succeeding Harry Miller, of Augusta, and Fred S. Gould, of Atlanta, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The retiring officers were named to the executive committee to fill vacancies resulting from elevation of their successors.

Scores Fund Use.

Use of public funds by public officials in attempts to control elections was attacked by Senator Walter P. George in an address which touched on taxation, labor, forms of government and the problems of business.

"Any person who would use relief funds to control American elections is unworthy of public office," the senator said, adding that "we ought to rid ourselves of any man who would use public funds in this way."

He urged reform of the leadership of the National Labor Relations board, declaring that no group or unit of labor should be allowed to select and dominate the administration of the NLRB.

'Unfair Taxes.'

Charging that unfair taxes have put the brakes on American business as illustrated in what he termed unreasonable taxes aimed at the high income group, Senator George stressed the necessity of a free competitive capitalist system of taxation to bring back prosperity.

"The man who doesn't even pay income taxes is hurt by this form of taxation. The government should control abuses in business as well as civil life and it is possible that congress at its next session may make drastic changes in the tax act."

Other speakers included Granger Hanks, Atlanta attorney, who spoke on the "Wages and Hour" act, and Lewis E. Gordon, Atlanta, assistant vice president of the Citizens and Southern National Bank, whose subject was "The Other Fellow's Point of View."

SAN JUAN AIR BASE URGED BY WINSHIP

Puerto Rican Governor Says Establishment Awaits Congress' Action.

MACON, Ga., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Major General Blanton Winship, Governor of Puerto Rico, said here today establishment of the proposed air base at San Juan depends on congressional action.

The army and navy boards both have visited the site and conferred with experts in aviation affairs at Puerto Rico, he said. "They have recommended establishment of the air base, but decision rests with the congress."

The Governor said he would like to see the air base located there.

"Commercial aviation has grown steadily in recent years," he said. "We have already at San Juan a very fine air field which covers 320 acres and has a 4,000-foot concrete runway. It is of great value to the island for land as well as water."

Governor Winship, who has been in the island since Thanksgiving, plans to return here to spend Christmas, and shortly thereafter will attend business conferences in Washington and New York before leaving for Puerto Rico.

MACON MAYOR VOTES AGAINST SALARY RAISE

MACON, Ga., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The mayor of Macon disapproved a proposed salary increase of $1,400 annually for the mayor of Macon.

Charles L. Bowden said he did not agree with the suggestion that the mayor's pay be increased from $12,000 to $13,400. He said he had established the city's credit and character. "Then," he said, "we can put a good man up there and pay him $5,000."

The term expires January 1, 1940, but the suggested charter amendment carrying the pay hike would not be effective during his present term.

Life of Tom Watson Is Discussed Here

The life of Tom Watson became a subject for conversation yesterday as these three leaders talked informally at a luncheon. Dr. C. Vann Woodward, center, assistant professor of social science at the University of Florida and author of a biography of Watson, addressed the Georgia Academy of Social Sciences last night. Left, is his father, H. A. Woodward, and, right, Dr. Cullen B. Gossnell, of Emory University.

Watson Led Great Social Revolt But Life Is Termed One of Tragedy

Dr. C. Vann Woodward, Florida Educator, Says Great Georgian's Leadership Was Badly Needed But Wasted, Like Eroded Southern Lands.

Tom Watson led one of the greatest movements of social revolt that has stirred the southern people since the War Between the States. Dr. C. Vann Woodward, assistant professor of social science at the University of Florida and author of a biography of Watson, declared in an address last night before the Georgia Academy of Social Sciences.

The author explained, however, that Watson's life was "a tragedy of great resources of leadership, badly needed, yet wasted and irreparably lost, like eroded southern lands."

Dr. Woodward, a graduate of Emory University, was the first speaker in a series of four addresses sponsored by the Academy.

"Renegade Southerners." "Watson's most refined contempt was always reserved for what he called renegade southerners, southerners who paid court, and became apologists for, the big eastern capitalists who invested in southern industries and sought to control southern politics," he asserted.

Dr. Woodward pointed out Watson's record in congress is filled with support of labor and social legislation far in advance of his time, and his opposition to militarism was marked throughout this and later periods.

"To understand the later course of Watson's political development it is necessary to take a glimpse at the methods that were used to defeat the Populist crusade," the author said.

"First there was a campaign of slander and propaganda against the Populists. . . . When these methods were found inadequate, sterner tactics were employed."

Explaining the impact of these experiences "could not but leave its mark upon a man," he turned to Watson's final days in the United States senate. He said:

"Lashing out insanely at the whole world, he attacked some of the most corrupt men in Harding's cabinet and some of the most dangerous forces in society and yet at the same time was ready to challenge to mortal combat the first office boy that crossed his path."

Paradox and contradiction dogged him to the very grave, where there were tributes, respectively, from Eugene Debs and the Ku Klux Klan."

He said the western wing of the Japanese forces was at Hwangshakal on the Canton-Hankow line 30 miles south of Yochow and about 130 miles southwest of Hankow. The east wing was about 150 miles southeast of Hankow on the other railway and within 30 miles of Nanchang, Kiangsi provincial capital.

The army spokesman said 2,000 Chinese had attacked a garrison at Tunghshun, near the western end of the Kiangsi-Hunan line, but were repulsed, leaving 700 dead. Tunghshun is about 65 miles south of Hankow.

RESERVE COMMISSIONS AWARDED ATLANTANS

Two Atlantans and one other Georgian have received commissions in the organized reserve, Fourth Corps Area headquarters announced yesterday.

Heyl Gremmer Tebo, of 12 East Shadowlawn avenue, and Joseph Gaston Nichols, of 933 North Highland avenue, both were named second lieutenants in the quartermaster reserve, and Fred Bonner Derrick Jr., of Clayton, was appointed second lieutenant in the infantry reserve.

FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES

REFUGEE LEADERS AGAIN TO PRESS PLAN UPON NAZIS

International Body Optimistic But It Still Must Obtain Consent for Jews to Emigrate.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(P)—Men of six nations decided today to tackle Germany again in the international effort to get her estimated 600,000 unwanted Jews out of the country under the $600,000,000 plan sponsored by United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

The action was taken by the vice chairman's committee of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees, composed of men representing the United States, Great Britain, France, The Netherlands, Brazil and Argentina, the latter a new addition.

Requests Ignored. Previously it was shown that Germany had ignored repeated requests that George Rublee, American who is permanent director of the intergovernmental committee, be invited to Berlin to discuss the Jewish emigration problem with German authorities.

The vice chairman's committee, on which Myron C. Taylor represented the United States, decided on a fresh effort to obtain German co-operation in a four-and-one-half-hour session.

The committee members reported progress in obtaining places for the refugees to make new homes.

But it was believed little could be done until Germany allowed the Jews to emigrate and modified the "flight tax" rule which strips them of virtually all they own as they leave the country.

Bonnet To Act. New approaches to Germany, it was understood, will be made by French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet through German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop when von Ribbentrop visits Paris next week.

There were unverified reports, also, that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the German reichsbank and former economics minister, might come to London in connection with the financial aspects of the refugee plan.

The committee heard from the French delegate of a fresh offer to admit 10,000 refugees to French colonies in Britain and the United States made "corresponding sacrifices."

Windsors Invite Workers' Family To Yuletide Visit

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(UP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor have invited a London workingman, his wife and two children to spend Christmas at their chateau at Cap d'Antibes, the Evening Star said today.

The couple was unidentified, but they were said to have been "staggered" by the invitation. The father is an ardent trade unionist and a British Legionnaire. A daughter and son are in elementary school. The couple was instructed not to tell anyone of the invitation.

The Evening Star said the idea originated with the Duke, who is eager to spend the holiday with English working people. The Duchess wanted the children invited so she could have a children's party and Christmas tree. The couple promptly accepted.

CIO ASKS MAYOR'S AID IN ENDING MEAT STRIKE

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—(P)—CIO unionists sent a committee of three to the city hall today to ask Mayor Edward J. Kelly to make an effort to bring a settlement of the strike at the Chicago stockyards.

Further negotiations between the strikers and the management have been scheduled for next Monday. Meanwhile, the dispute, now in its 12th day, has halted trade at the big livestock market.

Vanderbilt Dean Booms Sale of Cotton Stockings

Although Atlanta girls prefer socks to stockings, Co-ed Jane Vick, of Atlanta, a student at Vanderbilt University, blossomed out in white cotton stockings following the dean's edict that co-eds must cease wearing socks that expose bare legs. And she doesn't seem to be complaining, especially since Grid Star Art Keene is autographing her stockings. Edna Murray Davey (left) and Melina Smith, both of Nashville, retain their "socks appeal" despite the ban.

NILES TRAMMELL PROMOTED BY NBC

Georgia-Born Radio Official Becomes Executive Vice President of Chain.

Election of Niles Trammell, a native Georgian and a cousin of Trammell Scott, president of the Southern Baseball Association, an executive vice president of the National Broadcasting Company, was announced yesterday.

One of the youngest and best known executives in the radio business, Mr. Trammell was born in Marietta in 1894.

In 1923 he became associated with the Radio Corporation of America and two years later he was made assistant sales manager for RCA on the Pacific coast. Later he was transferred to NBC and in a short time was made manager of the central division with headquarters at Chicago.

Subsequently he was promoted to the position of vice president in charge of the same territory.

S. G. C. DEDICATES LIBRARY BUILDING

Spivey Pledges Continued Legislative Help.

DOUGLAS, Ga., Dec. 2.—Commencement of the state board of regents for its work, and a pledge of continued legislative aid in furthering educational development in Georgia marked addresses today at exercises dedicating South Georgia College's new $30,000 library building here.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford cited overcrowded conditions in units of the university system, which, he said, make construction of additional buildings imperative. The regents, he said, now have on file in Washington applications for two additional buildings for S. G. C.

John Spivey, president of the state senate, told his hearers there will be "no letdown" in the general assembly in completing its program of education and health.

"I am confident," he said, "that ways and means will be found to carry out the present program without curtailments."

Miss Mitchell, it was said, is unable to go to New York to receive the honor personally, and has recommended that H. S. Latham, vice president of the Macmillan Company, publishers of her novel, "Gone With the Wind," receive the medal for her. The presentation is to be made at a meeting of the society Wednesday at the Waldorf-Astoria.

American Volunteers Quit Spain, Rebel Bombers Give Final 'Party'

Planes Dump Bombs Near French Railway Station Where Americans Stood in Safety Shortly After Crossing Frontier Line.

LA TOUR DE CAROL, France (At the Spanish Frontier), Dec. 2.—(P)—The main body of American volunteers of the Spanish government's international brigades left Spain for home today, getting out of the country just a few hundred yards ahead of an insurgent bomb attack.

Still in formation as members of the Lincoln and Washington battalions of the 15th International brigade, the Americans, 332 strong but including only unwounded soldiers, marched across the border to La Tour de Carol in a well-publicized departure.

As they stood in the safety of the town's railway station, five insurgent planes plunged 18 bombs on the railway outside the Spanish border town of Alp, just a few hundred yards away.

The Americans, whose dramatic career in the civil war has included fighting in most of the war's major battles, remained unwounded in this last threatened accident to their farewell to France.

They were entrained for Paris, from where they will proceed within a few days to New York.

These Americans have fought on the Madrid, Belchite, Teruel, Aragon and Ebro fronts, seeing action in some of the heaviest battles of the war. A final group of about 300, including all wounded, will follow this unit soon, completing the repatriation of Americans under the Spanish government's policy of releasing all its foreign troops.

The group was under command of 23-year-old Major Milton Wolfe, tall and gaunt, reputedly the youngest field officer in the Spanish government army. He declined to disclose his home address.

The Americans included Ted Schneider, New Yorker, who left behind his physician-bridge, 26-year-old Dr. Francisca Silvestre La Cruz; Benjamin Kutler, another New Yorker, who found no use for the Phi Beta Kappa key delivered to him in the trenches; and Guy Thorpe, coal miner of Frankfort, Ill., who was glad he was going to their farewell to France because "that's where my mother lives."

The accident occurred on the Americus-Plains highway August 28, 1937. Testimony showed a group of high school students was riding in Mrs. Taylor's car, driven by Taylor Phillips, of Atlanta, described as her grandson.

The Taylor car collided with one driven by a negro and struck an embankment, throwing out some of the girls.

AYCOCK AND KING TRIALS SCHEDULED

Two Former Policemen To Face Court on Bribe Charges on 13th.

Trials for law enforcement officers charged with accepting bribes will open December 13 when two former police officers—Patrolman Frank J. Aycock and Detective J. B. King—go on trial.

Aycock, who is fighting his dismissal from the police department following conviction on charges of drunkenness, is accused of accepting $25 bribes from Jimmie Roberts and Paul Johnson, pre-repeal bootleggers. He and his partner, G. B. Scoggins, were accused jointly in the same bill. Scoggins was convicted recently.

King, who resigned from the department last week, faces charges of taking bribes from Roberts and H. L. Cobb, who also is under indictment for liquor law violation. New indictments against King

Martini, Jaywalker, Never Heard of It

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 2.—(P)—Nino Martini knows about jay-walking now. The opera and movie singer, arraigned in traffic court for crossing the street in the middle of a block, said he had "never heard of jay-walking."

After an admonition from Judge Frederic Wells, Martini was released.

Last week charged him with driving a car registered under a false name.

Both Aycock and King are represented by Attorney William Schley Howard, 2, E. Andrews, special racket prosecutor, will appear for the state.

Dance Benefits Promoter Held On Cross-Nation Series of Charges

Governor's Warrant for Frank Harris, Alias 'Mr. Miller,' Barks Attempt To Gain Freedom by Habeas Corpus Writ; Wanted in California.

Frank Harris, 47, last night was held in Fulton tower under a Governor's warrant that balked an attempt to obtain freedom by habeas corpus action.

Jailed on a multiplicity of complaints growing out of national promotion of benefit dances and barbecues, Harris was said by officers to have travelled under aliases of F. L. Lewis and Gene Tindall and to be known in Atlanta as "Mr. Miller."

Harris was arrested after a chase through an alley in Nashville, Tenn., Thursday by County Policemen Carter and Wray. He was brought here and held on a warrant from California.

During the afternoon yesterday, A. Walton Nall, attorney, instituted habeas corpus proceedings in Harris' behalf. They were being heard by Superior Court Judge Hugh M. Dorsey when attaches of the sheriff's office obtained a warrant from Governor Rivers which automatically holds Harris in jail until December 23.

Meanwhile, a warrant came from Macon. LaGrange authorities indicated they also would file charges.

Following Their Lunch Together, Gavin Asks Jane to Marry Him

By RUBY M. AYRES.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. When Jane, youngest of the Brookers three daughters, is 14, the family can scarcely believe the good news that her godmother, of whom they have seen little in years, has bequeathed her 3,000 pounds to be held in trust until she is 21. But that would be expected. Her godmother is an odd mixture of dreaminess and philosophy and her mother has long given up hope of "managing" her. Pamela, a year older, is saving and careful. But the eldest and the beauty of the family, would spend the money lavishly. But that would be expected. When Mrs. Brookers dies suddenly, Dr. Bingham, the Brookers' neighbor and family physician, Dr. Brookers' old second-hand car stops suddenly when Jane is to get her legacy. Gavin Montford, who has been in the Canadian wilds, returns to England and is visiting his uncle, Dr. Bingham, the Brookers' neighbor and family physician. Dr. Brookers' old second-hand car stops suddenly when Jane is to get her legacy. Gavin Montford, who has been in the Canadian wilds, returns to England and is visiting his uncle, Dr. Bingham, the Brookers' neighbor and family physician.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Gavin leaned on the mantelpiece, looking down at her. "I can imagine that with you, life would be always fun," he said. Her color rose a little, but she shook her head. "The family would not agree," she said. "Oh, the family?" he echoed. "A very nice family," she insisted gently. There was a little silence while the maid laid the cloth, and when she had gone Gavin said, "You ought to have been a gypsy, Jane." Her blue eyes flashed him a quick glance. "I shouldn't have minded. I can imagine far worse places than a caravan drawn by an old gray horse." "They have motors nowadays," he reminded her. "The danger of running out of gas," she said. "The beef was tough." Across the table Gavin looked at Jane and grimaced. "This must be a cut off the old gray horse," he said. "If you're hungry you'll enjoy it," she answered. "And the cabbage is lovely." He laughed. "You remind me of the last girl I took to lunch," he said reflectively. "It was in Toronto—we went to the best hotel. It seemed marvelous to me, but she wasn't so pleased." "Spoke," Jane said briefly. He leaned his arm on the table, looking at her steadily. "Has nobody ever spoiled you?" he asked. She shook her head. "I don't think so—I'm not the kind that gets spoiled." Pamela says—"she broke off abruptly. "What does Pamela say?" "That I'm the kind that stalks along through life with my head in the air." "Alone," he said, but Jane did reply to that, and presently he said, "I believe in comradeship—in being good friends with some one—with one person—in being able to laugh together and to take the rough with the smooth. Sentiment is all very well, but it's not weather-proof." "You seem to know a lot about it," she said. He shook his head. "I don't—it's only what I've seen—with others. I've known fellows—fellows who've lost their heads over a girl—been ready to chuck everything for her sake, and then—once they've got her—He stopped, and Jane nodded seriously. "I know—I've seen it, too," she said. They sipped their coffee by the fire and smoked cigarettes. The rain pattered down against the windows, but the fire burned cheerily, and Jane looked around the little room with happy eyes. "What are you thinking about?" he asked, and she said with a twinkle: "I was wondering perhaps if I could run a little inn like this—make it pay, I mean."

"Is it absolutely necessary to run something?" he asked. She nodded. "I think it is—I don't want just to do nothing for the rest of my life." "You'll marry," he said. Jane sat very still, her hands clasped loosely in her lap, suddenly conscious of her quickened heartbeats, though she managed to say indifferently, "I am not sure that even that's a very alluring prospect." He walked away from her to the window and stood looking out at the steadily falling rain, and Jane's eyes slowly lifted to follow him. "Still raining," she said, when at last the silence became unbearable. He did not answer, but he came back to stand beside her. "Will you marry me?" he asked. She sat there limply, just staring at him, and after a moment he went on, "I don't know why I'm asking you—we've met only three times, but I like you—I think we should be happy together. Life would be—rather a picnic—there's no need for me to tell you. We understand each other."

Her lips moved, but she could find no words, and he went on a little agitatedly. "You believe in friendship—comradeship—as I do. I'm not going to pretend that I've fallen violently in love with you or anything like that, but—but it seems to me that life might be rather a good thing—shared with you." The color deepened in his brown face as he saw the sudden tears in her eyes, and he said in distress, "I'm sorry—I know it must sound—presumptuous on my part, but—"

Jane moved a little, slipping her hand into his. "Don't be sorry," she said simply, "because I think life would be rather a good thing, too—shared with you." They paid the bill for the lunch and drove away. "Shall I have to speak to your father and make a formal request for your hand?" Gavin Montford asked comically. Jane laughed. "I shouldn't think it matters," she said serenely. "Because even if he objected—and he won't—I should marry you just the same." She frowned. "If wonder what the girls will say?" "That you've made a bad bargain, I imagine," he answered gruffly. "I don't care what they say—I don't care what any one says." She glanced at him and away again. "Except you, of course," she added softly. Gavin Montford flushed a little. "Thank you," he said, and then after a moment, "We may not be able to marry for some time."

"I don't mind that either," Jane was feeling utterly content. She had never quarreled with life. But that day it seemed as if she could never be sufficiently grateful to it for giving her so much happiness. "I'm perfectly happy," she thought, and her thoughts ran on ahead into the future. They would be such good friends, as well as lovers; they would always understand each other, they would never quarrel; she was not in the least hurt because Gavin had said that he was not "wildly in love with her"—love was such a disappointing, short-lived thing—it was far finer to be sure of comradeship. Montford said suddenly with a half sigh, "I shall have to beard the lion in his den tonight, I suppose." "You mean—Doctor Bingham?" "Yes." "What about? she asked in her direct way, and he answered: "I want him to put up the money for a partnership in a firm in London—it's quite a good thing, and, of course, it would be a purely business arrangement. They're an export firm—I've interviewed them already, and they seem to think I'm possible." "Do you think he'll do it?" Gavin Montford shrugged his broad shoulders. "I don't see why he should refuse. It will all be done legally, and he can afford it. I suppose I've no claim on him actually, but—well, he's always saying that blood is thicker than water, and so I'm hoping he'll be generous."

"I hope he will," Jane said, and then she asked a little differently, "And if he is—does that mean—?" She stopped in most unusual embarrassment. Montford added for her. "Does it mean that we can get married? Yes, it does." She gave a quick sigh. "That would be wonderful," and then she gave up her usual frankness. "Where shall we live?" she asked eagerly. He looked amused. "Where would you like to live?" "Somewhere in the country." "So should I—but it might be better to have a place in town to start with—I should have to go to the city every day." "Oh, of course," she agreed readily. "Well—I shan't mind, and then—when we've made enough money—"

"When?" he said ruefully. She looked at him with confident eyes. "You will," she said. "You'll make a lot of money, and then we'll buy a place in the country and keep dogs and a pony—and have a garden, with perhaps a stream running at the bottom." Montford laughed. "It sounds ideal," he agreed. "Almost as good as an advertisement I once came across in Canada, when I was looking round for a bit of real estate. Judging from the advertisement the place was a paradise, but when I traveled 500 miles to see it—well—"

"Awful!" he said. "It was a nightmare. Rocks and withered trees—and no water anywhere about." "What a shame." They drove some little distance in silence before Montford said, "And if the old man will be obliging, I can fix things up at once." "And if he won't be obliging?" she asked. He looked down at her ruefully. "I don't know," he said. "I can never see the sense of worrying," she said simply. "It doesn't do any good, and besides, there's always something to be thankful for, isn't there? Especially now," she added softly. "Now?" "You, I mean." His dark brows met in a quick frown, and he said a little gruffly, "Do you think I'm playing—fair?" "I don't know what you mean." "I mean that I've nothing to offer you—nothing real or settled. Most girls expect so much."

"That's where they're so silly," Jane said calmly. "It always seems to me so much more fun to start at the bottom of the ladder with—some one you like, and to climb up together instead of starting at the top, and not having any worlds left to conquer. Life must be so dull if you've got so much money that you can buy anything you want, and go anywhere you like. I should hate to marry a rich man."

My Day: Reptile Farm Tells Truly American Story

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

SARASOTA, Fla.—I certainly spent an interesting hour yesterday afternoon at the animal and reptile farm on the outskirts of Sarasota. Animals are always interesting, particularly when handled by someone who has no fear of them and who knows how to treat them so that they trust him.

We saw two of the most poisonous variety of snakes, rattlers of various kinds and the cottonmouth moccasin. Their poison is "milked" every Thursday and given to the medical center in Venice, Fla., where a scientist is carrying on experiments in making serums which will benefit arthritis and neuritis, as well as to save people who have been bitten by snakes.

The alligators, the crocodiles and the monkeys are all interesting, but the owls appealed to me especially, particularly one dignified gentleman who, when asked to wink one eye, did so. There is an eagle who laughs and all the birds spread their feathers and show off at command. A little group of Seminole Indians are settling down in the Indian village next to the farm so that people may see their mode of life.

I am glad to say that they are being taught to live in a somewhat more sanitary environment than the tribe which I once visited further south in Florida. I will never forget my horror on that occasion when I realized under unsanitary conditions we allowed these wards of the government to live. It was almost impossible to keep the flies away from the food and, incidentally, the babies. The Seminoles wear the most colorful costumes, but the little girls wear such voluminous skirts that I wonder how they move around.

The man who runs the reptile farm told us his story with such zest that I do not think he would mind my telling you about it, because it is such a characteristic American story with its courage and success.

Three years ago he had no money, but he was in love with a young lady who had as much courage as he had. "I was out with her one evening and I sat her up on a wall and wait until we were better off, or should we go get married and start a reptile farm together?" She decided that we might as well begin together, so I borrowed $14 and my friends helped me and we came out here to live. Today I own the place and all the animals. People know I give them a good home, so I have been given several interesting animals, besides being allowed to train some for well-known animal fanciers.

In this couple's home, where all the baby animals, as well as the family, seem to be housed at night, his attractive plucky wife looks after the little store, where you may buy various things made of snakeskin and be quite sure that the article is genuine.

Isn't that a truly American story?

Notes From Diary Of 'Lady' With House

By Elizabeth Boykin.

Monday—Had tea today with a charming Finnish woman, Aino Aalto, the wife of Finland's leading modern architect and herself an architect of distinction. In fact, they are in America now to supervise the work on the Finnish exhibit (which was submitted anonymously). Mr. Aalto won first and second places and Mrs. Aalto third. They have a family into the bargain, a daughter, 13, who is a Shirley Temple fan, and a son, 11, whose father is his hero. Even as your children and mine!

Tuesday—Try this prescription for your old oak or mission furniture—put it against white walls with Scotch plaid cotton serge for draperies and spreads or slip covers.

Wednesday—There's a pale shade of blue made with ultramarine and white, that is as smart a wall color as I've seen this year. With glistening white woodwork and white draperies, you'd have something to take your breath away. Season with chair coverings of a wide striped fabric with raspberry as the predominating color, add your old mahogany furniture and serve at your Christmas party.

Thursday—Marguerite Mergentime is another lady with a house who does interesting things—perhaps you've seen her charming tablecloth designs. They're printed linen, informally gay and bright. The one I'm excited about this minute is red with white snow flakes flying all over it. Marguerite has two grown daughters but you'd never suspect it to see her dashing around the place, looking so slim and stylish herself.

Friday—I'm really doing my Christmas shopping early this year, partly because it's more fun when there isn't that last-minute desperation about it, partly because I like to scatter the expenditures over several weeks. That way I know where I am all along.

I don't like to fall in a heap financially on Christmas eve. Besides I love to prolong the suspense and excitement of getting ready for Christmas.

Saturday—I ran across this in one of Lin Yutang's books. "Familiarity I feel, is more important than individuality (in a house). For no matter how big and pretentious a house a man may have, there is always one particular room that he likes and really lives in, and that is invariably a small, unpretentious room, disorderly and familiar and warm."

Sunday—Just a word of warning to choir, young and old. You can't have too many Christmas carol serenades to suit me. I love street singers any time, but especially during the Christmas season. So I hope you're busy rehearsing these December days.

Average Player Recognizes Finesse

By Harold Sharpsteen.

For every two guesses a bridge player is required to make, one should be wrong.

A good working knowledge of common safety plays, therefore, should save a trick once in every two hands in which a guess is necessary.

Few average players recognize and take advantage of the following situation in which a finesse for the King is entirely proper, holding 10 cards of a suit.

DUMMY
8 6 4 3
W 8 4 3 E
A Q 9 7 2
DECLARER

Dummy's Jack is the lead, rather than a small card.

When the adverse King-ten-five divided 2-1 a trick will be won or lost depending upon the location of the missing king.

If East holds all, the King will be forced to cover dummy's Jack. As West shows out on the play, declarer's Ace-Queen tenace is established over East's guarded ten.

When West holds all, East will show out on the first lead and dummy's Jack forces West's King for one loser. Declarer's Ace-Queen is now available to clear the suit.

The lead of the Jack will never permit the unnecessary loss of a trick, holding 10 cards of a suit with the King ten missing. In certain situations a trick will be gained.

YOUR TABLE MANNERS.

Question: Are the laws of contract bridge designed to prevent dishonest practices?

Answer: No. The laws are designed to define correct procedure and to provide adequate remedy in all cases where a player "accidentally" disturbs the proper course of the game to gain unfair advantage.

Til tomorrow . . .

Of Interest to Women

Q. My children are continually skinning their hands and knees. What is the best way to treat the injuries?

A. Make a warm solution of boric acid, using one teaspoon of powder to a cup of warm water. When the powder is dissolved, bathe the injured parts with sterilized cotton.

Janet Gaynor plays one of her best roles in M-G-M. film, "The Young in Heart."

Janet Gaynor Nervously Watches Self In Preview of "The Young in Heart"

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 2.—Janet Gaynor, clutching the hand of her celluloid self in "The Young in Heart," in the same clicker is Paulette Goddard, whom I find somewhat of a disappointment in spite of the pre-release boasting of Boes David Selznick. Speech has rendered Miss Goddard very self-conscious, although she will undoubtedly improve with experience—if she is led gently up the stardom ladder.

Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, Mickey Rooney, Sonja Henie—in the order named—will shortly be listed as the box-office champions of 1938. Who would have thought that an ice-skater would ever take precedence over Myrna Loy or Bette Davis?

As for Master Rooney, it was more or less expected that he would be listed above such excellent emoters as even Spencer Tracy and Paul Muni. But I want to give a word of advice to Mickey. If you want to stay at the head of the procession, keep a toe-hold on your good manners. I refer to your recent exhibition on the set when saying goodbye to that young lady fan from Kansas City. Next time you say, "Glad to have met you, I'm sure—I'm not so sure," make sure the visitor is out of earshot before saying the last four words.

Bing Crosby and Walt Disney are backing the new 33-acre recreation center in Hollywood to be patterned after New York's Madison Square Garden. Ice hockey, championship boxing bouts, professional tennis, et al., will be featured. Stockholding memberships are selling $1,000 a share. . . . Howard Hughes is sending Olivia

De Havilland a big box of flowers every day. But he can't get a date with the girl because she is working. And, when she is working, she makes it a rule to avoid dates with the opposite sex. So Millionaire Mr. Hughes has joined the queue waiting for Olivia's first non-working day.

Martha Raye denies the rumored rift with husband Dave Rose. Then what is the reason for her new-found sadness? . . . Barbara Stanwyck tells the ladies and gentlemen of the press, "There are three things I won't discuss—Dion (her adopted son), Robert Taylor (you all know who he is), and Frank Fay (her ex-husband)."

But, she says optimistically, "I will talk about Cecil B. De Mille (her new boss)." Don't bother, Barbara. Mr. De Mille does all right talking for himself.

Talking about talking, Mrs. Gary Cooper is doing a lot of speech-making in London on how to be happy through marriage—to Gary Cooper. Her creed is embodied in six rules: 1. Be very considerate; 2. Give him all your love and complete freedom (do you really mean that, Mrs. Cooper?); 3. Never lose your temper; 4. Keep the children well behaved; 5. Make the home attractive; 6. Share interests—i. e., work, sports and vacations. (And now all that we girls have to do is to get a Gary Cooper for a husband.)

Deanna Durbin is 16 years old on December 4 and has promised herself an exquisite birthday present. "I'm going to sleep late and loaf at home," she told me with ecstatic anticipation. . . . Gene Raymond would like to return to the stage now that his film career is not as shining as it was, but he does not want to leave wife Jeanette MacDonald, whose contract keeps her in Hollywood. It might be a box-office idea to team this very much-in-love couple in a movie. Meanwhile, Gene is filling in time buying the Christmas presents of self and wife—the latter is currently screen-emoting in "Broadway Serenade."

When Garbo was in Paris, she told an interviewer—"The only things I want are life, sun and liberty. And the only place to find them is in Europe." Well, what is holding her back? . . . Errol Flynn denies he is going to be a father, but says that, if he is, he hopes it's a boy! . . . A very exasperated Dorothy Lamour threatens "to take steps," unless those rumors divorcing her from Herbie Kay cease. . . . Maxie Rosenbloom has three sets of nylons. One is headed "Maxie Rosenbloom, Boxer." Another "Maxie Rosenbloom, Actor." And another, "Maxie Everett Rosenbloom, Night Club Owner and Entertainer."

Booklet Helps To Interpret Dreams

Foolish dreams! What do they have to do with sensible, everyday life?

In her dream, Beth's making a futile attempt to mend a pitcher. When she awakens, she'll wonder what it all means.

But her dream could be easily interpreted by a modern psychologist. He'd tell Beth that it's closely related to a real-life situation. Last week Beth passed Laura without speaking. But Beth's broken pitcher dream shows that she secretly longs to "patch up" this broken friendship.

It's important to understand the meaning of dreams when you realize that they reveal hidden desires and fears. Repressed and ignored, such emotions are a troublesome recurrent in your everyday life. They may seriously distort your personality. When you interpret dream symbols, you can direct your emotional life into happier channels.

Have you dreamed of falling from a cliff or a high building? You are unconsciously fearful of some step you're about to take—a marriage or a new job. Think, ask why you are afraid.

If you dream that you cannot speak, it implies that you rely too much on the help of others. Learn to stand on your own feet.

A dream of being punished reveals that you are suffering from a feeling of inferiority.

Get a clue to your inner emotions, learn to analyze your dreams. In our 40-page booklet, Interpreting Your Dreams, a noted psychologist explains symbols and images. Describes typical dreams, answers that baffling question: Do dreams come true?

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, INTERPRETING YOUR DREAMS, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Losing Avoirdupois Puts One's Will Power to Test

By Ida Jean Kain.

Avoirdupois puts your will power to the test, and the heavier you are the more will power it takes to reduce. It is not so hard to lose 10 pounds but it is quite an undertaking to take off 50.

Sometimes in an effort to cheer you on, I try to make reducing sound like a gay adventure. But just between you and me, I know better. Reducers have a hard row to hoe. And now that you have caught me in a weak moment I might as well confess amazement that so many of you come through as well as you do.

The firmness with which many of you stick to the straight and starchless path bears out the observation of the man who said "The little woman has a whim of iron." And, although it is beside the point it might not be entirely amiss to tell you that most of you do much better on your diets than most men. There are exceptions, of course, but a man is apt to put reducing in the same category as any other form of physical pain. He doesn't bear up under it very well.

No matter how much weight you have to lose, the first three days are the ones that take fortitude. A sudden cut in calories makes eating seem like the most important thing in the world. But, as all successful reducers will tell you, reducing gradually does get easier. For the first few days the main object is to lick your appetite. Once your appetite is under control, the diet itself helps you to carry on.

A balanced, low calorie diet is largely composed of the protective foods, and, while extremely limited in comparison with the way you have been eating through these protective foods, it supplies all your bodily demands. You may find it difficult to believe, but this slim list of foods keeps you from being so desperately hungry. Experiments have proved that your appetite is more easily appeased when you are getting sufficient amounts of vitamins, minerals and protein, as you do on such a diet. A tendency to overeat may be the unconscious effort to supply the body with these food elements.

A good reducing diet also takes satiety into account and contains some of the foods that stay with you—lean meat, hard-cooked eggs, bananas, etc. Bulky salads and crunchy biscuits require considerable chewing and that makes you think you are having more to eat. Hot beverages or soups are a comfort in any meal and they certainly help to round out the low calorie menus. All these things make the diet easier to follow.

There is an art, you see, as well as a science in planning a reducing menu. These advantages of these dietary tricks—they make a hard job a bit easier.
